

Do you observe speedup higher than can be achieved on a single machine?

Yes, there is definitely higher speedup that is achieved on performing numerical integration on multiple machine than single machine.

For any given N , we can observe that as the intensity increases the speedup also increases significantly.

Also with the increase in cores per node, the intensity and the speedup are directly proportional as with the increase in intensity, speed up also increases.